Comments:

My concern is for the Hoodo Roadless Area. I support Option A in particular because of wintering elk & mountain goats. Human activity on high powered snow machines affects animals who are coping with winter and limited food supplies. I have witnessed snow mobiles chase wildlife in deep snow. There are enough snow areas for these riders to go elsewhere in Idaho and Montana.

The Priest Burn roadless area needs your protection as a proposed wilderness until officially listed.

Eliminate Option B

I have had the opportunity to visit many special locations like Suckeyou, Kidd, Oregon, and Cliff lakes. I've hiked out of Clearwater crossing into this fantastic area as well.

Let's keep some of the best country Idaho and Montana as special for the present and the future.
