

To whom it may concern,

I'm a lifelong Alaskan and appreciate everything that the state has to offer. especially the fact that we have access to some of the largest untouched ecosystems in the United States so I understand how important it is that these are protected so that everyone else can experience everything this great state has to offer. But I also understand that using these lands can be done in a way that allows people to utilize and enjoy them as well as protects them for future Generations. That's why I believe that out of the four propositions brought forward that B meets the common ground of both protecting the environment as well as allowing recreational access to those who enjoy it.
