The most helpful scoping comments are those that focus on resource issues and identify information such as: 1) specific resource concerns; 2) data that should be included in the analysis; 3) project design elements that meet the purpose and need statement and should be considered in the range of alternatives; and 4) best management practices, standard operating procedures, or mitigation that would help reduce impacts.

Really? Do you love Idaho? Why don't you do your homework. Big Talk from Midas Gold. Before you believe it, go online and look up all their past dealings and financial records, from past years. Now lets use some examples. ① Silver Falcon Mining Company in Silver City, Idaho. Big talk - scalped the people out of a million dollars (The investors) and left. They tore up the whole mountain. ② Oregande Idaho, near Elk City. Go look what they did to the sides of the mountain, while digging their tunnels that can NEVER be repaired. ③ Another example 16 to 1 mine in California. The Canadians came in, took the pillar out of the mine to find a small amount of gold to make it look wonderful to investors - they took all their money and moved out. ④ The Ruby mine, Downsville, Calif. Again the Canadians came in spent a little money on the mine, collected a lot of money from investors and moved out. Do you really want this ~~scare~~ in Idaho, here at Warm Lake. Don't Believe everything you hear or what they say. Restore the land Really? It will NEVER happen.
