The Tongass National Forest is a critically important old growth forest. We are losing more and more of these forests to human exploitation, and once old growth forests are cut down they take hundreds to thousands of years to recover (unlike newer growth forests which are already being used for lumber). The forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. The economic benefits are minuscule compared to the environmental costs and the economic costs of cutting it down in terms of damage to critical industries like the salmon industry, as well as the global costs of climate change from the CO2 release caused by cutting down old growth forests like this. I visited the Tongass National Forest in September with my family to celebrate my 80th birthday. I was extremely disappointed to hear that part of this beautiful forest may be used for logging and mining. Our resources are irreplaceable and this proposed taking of this beautiful forest is shocking to me. I heartily condemn this proposed act of vandalism to this beautiful forest.

one day. A state that isn't full of big cities and tons of people. As a child growing up in rural Kentucky I loved to explore the wilderness. My dad would take me hunting and it was practically impossible to get me out of the woods. Being among the trees and on top of wooded knobs, I felt like I was on top of the world. As I grew older that feeling has never changed. Being able to see sites such as the Olympic National Forest and exploring the Red Woods in California was truly an amazing experience. I felt that I was among giants! Now I'm learning that people want to make it okay to strip lands such as this for money. Haven't we done enough for the sake of a little money? As a rural republican I would love the chance to take my father on a trip to the Tongass National Forest so that we can both be awestruck without seeing the land stripped of it's beauty. I am proud to be an American and I love this country, but we're slowly turning it everything into a big business and selling everything that gives me pride for this country. All in the

The planet needs forests to keep the air clean and destroying it will affect the ecosystem. We as a nation don't want our planet to actually become a trash laden parking lot of a wasteland. Every living thing has a purpose in this world even plants in maintaining a beneficial balance but we can't keep letting everything go like it won't have eventual consequences. Just because a penalty isn't immediate doesn't mean there's none to expect and we need to think of how all our actions affect not just that place but every eventual thing around us. I am not a democrat, my beliefs typically align with those of the Republican Party. In fact, I strongly disagree with many of the democratic movements today, including their intention to take away the citizens' guns and freedom of speech. However, when it comes to the rainforests, it breaks my heart to imagine them being torn down. There are many ways to avoid destroying these unique and valuable habitats. For instance, fast-growing bamboo is a great renewable resource that can be grown and harvested for the same purposes. Please consider an alternative to tearing into the Tongass National Forest. Thank you.

Trump...we need leaders that care for our future. We need leaders to see this is our last opportunity to preserve this beautiful planet we are on. You have this chance...this one chance out of so many missed opportunities to make a huge difference, to hear us, to seek us out and the natives...the land, and make a difference. Everyone knows we must protect it. It's the most common sense we all carry. Your directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. You are making choices that we, The American people, if not the entire world, see is not for our greater good...but destruction. Find it in your heart to protect us, and our land for the future of our children. Oil is old age...the future is science. Dont do this. There will be a price to pay, even for you...for all of us.

The Tongass National Forest is a unique, extremely fragile, precious ecosystem, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil/natural gas extraction has permanent, detrimental consequences. Only one percent (1%) of Alaska's economy comes from the logging industry. Opening the Tongass for resource extraction will not add to the economy but will, in fact, cause a huge, negative ripple effect in Alaska's economy. The destruction of the Tongass ecosystem is totally unacceptable. The Tongass must be protected in its entirety, in perpetuity, with no exceptions. when climate scientists - legitimate practicing scientists educated in biology and earth science and environmental science, not just oil and mining executives and Fred Singer - who do not 'believe' in climate change are quite literally impossible to find, here you stand pretending it isn't a problem. In a time when climate change is costing Americans not just money but their homes and their lives, such as with the hurricanes in North Carolina and the fires in California and the monsoons in the midwest, here you stand seeking to expand the fossil fuel industry. In a time when biodiversity loss threatens American farms and fisheries across the continent, here you stand seeking to decimate another habitat necessary to migratory species - in probable conflict, I might add, with the Endangered Species Act and MBTA. ignoring the scientific facts of global climate change, especially in this circumstance will be extremely detrimental to the people of Alaska as well as the rest of the world. I think it was a huge mistake when it was initially called global warming. After all the big announcements we had years of extremely cold winters with a lot of snow and blizzards. But we also can't deny the increase of severe weather in both summer and winter months. Huge increases in strength and severity of tornadoes and hurricanes, severe flooding and prolonged drought, heat indexes going up, etc.. Yet this administration is trying to cut back on protection for areas like Tongass Forest. We saw what happened in Africa, exploiting natural resources, deforestation there, in the Amazon , etc., which lead to not only more severe droughts in Africa, it let dangerous virus out into the world. Think about HIV, now a world wild crisis, and let's not forget Ebola! Once contained by the fact that people lived in small villages with little

Our efforts as a collective is to improve/fix climate change, to protect wildlife, rainforests and their habitats & all earths inhabitants, will greatly decrease if Trump continues to make decisions without clearly seeing the consequences that cause more harm to our planet. He is not seeing the big picture! You can include me in the fight to protect the Tongass Forest!!

environmental advocate who was raised in a rural, republican-dominated town in Central New York. In my short 24 years, I have watched more and more areas of the world be destroyed for what is supposed to provide great economic gain. I ask you to please cease support for the practices that intend to open in the Tongass National Forest. Please. In the current state of the changing global ecosystem, it is YOUR duty to communicate the cascading impacts that opening up destructive environmental practices will have on Alaska and the rest of the world in the long run. This administration is too economically short-sighted and fails to consider the costs that will have to be undertaken to offset and restore the habitat degradation that opening the Tongass National Forest to logging and oil extraction will require. At some point, all people are going to need to realize that we require the services that can be derived from the endurance of natural ecosystems, and that degrading them may have economic benefits in the EXTREME short term, but

Aliens mock us about this, I doubt Ill get recognized by any serious group of people but our watchers (aliens) are disgusted with us and absolutely hate deforestation... I wrote this on fb and preach much about our issue... Am I the only one hearing these beings complaining how our species is going to run out of air to breathe? Old trees produce our air and we do not have replacements in this oxygen production! I'm from North Idaho and 'they' complain about the effects humans(white people) have on that ecosystem. Forget that President Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. Forget that he is a billionaire who is short-sighted. Forget that your actions will not only affect your future generations, but the wildlife, the plants, the ecosystem in general, the aquatic life, and the precious topsoil so very necessary in ancient forests. I experienced what logging did to my 126 acres of tree farm in South Carolina. It polluted the spring fed 3.5 acres of pond, it stripped the topsoil when the rains washed it into the pond, it devastated the plants the wildlife were dependent upon for food. I was shocked to learn this experience and have regretted it every since. NEPA ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based,

Coming from our state, you know firsthand how logging transforms mighty, old-growth forest--refuge of ancient creatures, manufacturer of the planet's clean air--into sterile, tree factories. The Tongass National Forest is of global importance. Opening any portion of it to logging, mining, oil and gas will destroy its priceless benefits to your family, mine, everyone's--forever. Or however long "forever" lasts, once fire, flood, oil, carbon, extinction take their toll. The simplest cost/benefit analysis reveals the foolhardiness of sacrificing the priceless benefit of the pristine Tongass for short-term economic gain. As an American, and a Georgian, I pray you can summon the courage it will take to speak truth to power. Save the Tongass National Forest.

modern life and behavior. Every day you can read about natural catastrophes happening around the world as a result of human interference with nature and complicated ecosystems that impact on a global scale. As humans we have taken actions impacting generations to come. If we continue these aggressive actions, destroying complicated ecosystems built over centuries for a short term capital gain not only we but also future generations are doomed. We think we are only cutting a few strings with the scissor and what harm could be done by doing that, but forget to see the whole picture. Like a hot air balloon with lots of strings, the nature is a complicated system that has to be observed as a global matter. Opening the Tongass National Forest to logging, mining, or oil and gas are some of these strings that are considered cut for a short term financial gain while the consequence of playing with the scissor will have permanent, detrimental consequences. As humans we have to stop thinking that we possess the right to play with nature world with trees, and I don't mean a world with trees planted in our front or back yard. I want to raise kids and take them to visit luscious trees with roots as ancient as the planet itself. It is extremely sad to me to think that so much of our natural world is being destroyed on a daily basis and the lack of foresight about climate change is a little disturbing. Do you care about the future of our nation? Is it really worth it to make a couple extra bucks now, so that our people will suffer greatly in the future? I realize that I can come off as a bit dramatic, but I have to say something. Climate change is a real issue whether we like it or not, and if we continue at this rate, there may be no future for our species. If you want to be part of the absolute destruction of humanity to make some extra money now, that is your prerogative, and I can't stop you, but I will say, I believe it takes a sociopath to implement policy that directly accelerates climate change for the exchange of personal gain and instant gratification. I understand that cutting down these forests may help

We have honestly done enough to the wild life just by being alive, we have taken away their homes to build our own, we have taken away their freedom for our entertainment, and he wishes to take away one of their only refugees. Us human also need trees to survive just like animals but according to Trump that isn't something we really need. And once again he is taking away other living creatures home and you know why I think that is? Because he only cares what happens to him but these are the animals home we're talking about! Yet, we haven't improved our voting systems to keep up with the changes of our populace. We continue to deny people their right to vote. We must work on all of the following issues for elections to be fair and consistent in all states, because starting with "Root Cause" is the beginning of problem solving: 1. Automatic voter registration for all

The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. Climate change is not the only issue here though. All of the animals that make a home in that forest will be displaced, possibly endangering species and definitely causing overpopulation in the land left. Just because we have the ability to do something or make something that would allow us to make more money doesn't mean we should. Money will not mean anything when the earth is dead because people refused to see the signs. Putting money into their fishing industry would be much more lucrative than logging and wouldn't require the destruction of one of the only remaining wild forests.

timber at a net loss to the taxpayers. Up to 600 million dollars in the past 20 years have been spent subsidizing the logging industry in the Tongass. Exempting the Tongass from the Roadless rule only allows for more of these losses to continue. The construction costs of the roads themselves outweigh the revenues expected from the timber sales. This leaves out future maintenance costs of the roads, selling costs, and potential risks to local riparian habitats due to construction of new roads. The salmon species accounts for over half of the seafood industry that generates upwards of 1 billion dollars per year in the state of Alaska. I also fear much of these old growth trees will be processed in mills overseas rather than in the region as has happened in past timber sales. Cutting trees that have been around for hundreds of years to yield the taxpayers a loss is a complete and utter disappointment of government resources. I'm 15 , i am only 15 years along and the planet is already degrading so bad. what will it take to show everyone that if we don't stop , our planet & our lives will be stripped and taken from us. just as fast as something comes something can come and that logic comes with every privilege we have anywhere. I wanna grow up and be able to have kids that don't have to live in a bubble because the earths air could kill them , or bring kids into a world where they can't go swimming because they'll come back with 3 arms and a leg just from being in the damn water. i want to grow up , and honestly that is something that i thought i'd never say because i struggle with taking my own life sometimes. but then i travel, i'm on the beach watching the sun go down , or i'm outback watching the trees flow throw the breeze and i realize that this world is so beautiful, so unique you could never mock it or replica it. i want to grow up and travel the world with some beautiful baby's of my own. save this planet so we can save each other

You know what's right and what's wrong. I know I cannot convince anyone, and I know you won't read this, but it doesn't change that I'm hoping you do what is right. Our planet is such a treasure, and the profits gained will never outweigh that. The profits will fade away within a decade, while the forest would remain for centuries if left alone. Our grandchildren's quality of life will be affected by the decisions you and others are making right now. I just hope those decisions are based off what is good for the people, and not greed. Whatever those decisions may be.

be. Half of the world is on fire right now, and has been for years, and all you can think about is destroying it more? It is ridiculous and unnecessary. Animals need shelter and places to flourish and thrive. They shouldn't have to hide away and live in harsh conditions with no protection. They contribute more to this world than we do by not doing a damn thing to the earth but what it is meant for. Humans destroy and tarnish every thing they come in contact with anymore. We could change the world as actual human beings with hearts that do not only think about money all the damn time. How about you use your brain and realize the impact this has on the animals of this world that God himself put here. Yet you just want to destroy his creation that is so beautiful and innocent. No wonder they hide from us or attack us when we come around. They are so used to humans being correlated with destruction and insensitivity. You see humans who work with wild animals out of compassion and love receive the same love and loyalty back. Animals are just

These belong to the children, even those not yet here, not to the machines that will ravage this pristine wilderness. These lands belong most of all to the earth, to help our atmosphere remain viable for life. Please stop giving our land away to the highest bidder. We need wilderness areas. no forest in the United States like the Tongass, which require hundreds of years to grow. It's a sight our Founding Father's would have also seen, so preserving them preserves our American Heritage. Would we cut down our old growth forests to make way for telegraph lines? Today's needs will be outstripped in the hundreds of years required to regrow those forests. Protecting the old growth rainforest in the Pacific north west IS A MATTER OF NATIONAL SECURITY. The forest contains a treasure trove of medically active plants and fungi that could save this species from the brink of extinction. In a time where our species greatest threat is an international pandemic, we need to have access to these medicines. Many mushrooma such as Agarikon, turkey tail, and reishi can be found growing there and exhibit phenomenal anti-viral and anti-cancerous properties. None of this even touches on the subject of how the forests are the lungs of our planet. But they are. Please help protect these revered forests. They are essential to humanity's survival.

The Tongass National Forest is an important habitat for all sorts of wildlife, especially the Alexander Archipelago Wolf. America's war on wolves needs to stop, starting with this logging folly. We cannot continue to put profit over the environment. The forest is a national treasure that must be preserved. Please reconsider these cruel and unnecessary measures. Protect America's wildlife.

exempting this area from the no roads rule would bring economic and environmental harm to the region. The primary source of income is tourism and salmon fishing. Logging in this region would damage the salmon spawning areas and destroy home for wildlife that has no other place to go. Saw mills in the area are not the primary source of employment and never have been. Many Alaskans have their own mills and cut wood from their own property when building. I'm an ordinary American. I care about the horrific deforestation going on around the world and I fear for the future generations. We Americans are stewards of the global treasure, the Tongass National Forest. Please do not allow it to be destroyed on your watch, and on mine. We are all in this together. All the money in the world will not give our children and grandchildren clean air to breathe. A rainforest can. The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. This is the only planet we have. If anyone is going to die, it's going to be the human beings on planet earth. The problem is us, not Mother Nature. Which means, we must adjust to the changes of our climate and do what is best for OUR planet!!! FUCK what beliefs you have, none of it matters if we all die because we can't take care of our home. Come together, over me.

The Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% of our economy comes from the logging industry. Destroying old growth and this biodiversity isn't worth the permanent destructive consequences. Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) The NEPA ensures that major decisions on polices affecting the environment are; fact-based, considers alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. This reckless directive will cause the loss of an old-growth forest that will intensify the effects of climate change. I adamantly OPPOSE this policy.

Please motion to disapprove this proposal! As the caretakers of Earth (this magnificent place we call home) we have to take action in the direction to preserve this land. The environment as we know it is being drained of its resources. Enough is enough! This current way of thinking is counterproductive, and does us no good. Do we not already have enough land for these same ideas (logging, mining, oil & gas extraction)? We can only be dependent of fossil fuels for so long. Is it ideal? Why are we working so diligently to destroying our very own home? Is there really any logical reason to support these actions? We should take steps in the direction to restore our land and . In the constitution, his role is as head of the executive force. He is supposed to report to the lawmakers and the judges, not the other way around. This directive is not his alone to make, and is a great affront to the constitution. The president is not the CEO of America. And it seems Trump has still yet to learn that. The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. If you destroy any forest as a human then you are killing us faster than when we are supposed to die. Instead of trying to make money why don't you help the world itself and save it before we all become extinct. You are a human who is letting the world be destroyed by your own hands while you have the power to make a difference in everyone's lives, but your own selfishness is becoming your own downfall.

In the face of the current climate crisis, the last thing the global ecosystem needs is the cutting down of more intact/old growth forests. We should not be pursuing the finding of more oil and gas, but instead focusing our efforts on renewable energy sources. Additionally, Intact forests provide efficient ecosystem services (carbon sequestration, oxygen production, water filtration, etc.), which we humans rely on. Intact forest also provides important habitat for many creatures, and in cutting down the forest, we are much more likely to endanger or lose those species all together. We as a nation should be conserving as much wilderness area as possible not destroying it further. Not just to preserve these ecosystems but for our future generations to look on. Will they see thriving natural landscape or a barren wasteland? It is our duty to take care of these lands. without wild things, and some who cannot. I am one who cannot. Conservation is suffering because those in control seem to have an archaic Abrahamic concept of land. Land is abused because it is regarded by companies and investors as a commodity belonging to them. When of the human species see land as a community to which we belong, we may begin to use it with love and respect. In the past, We as a nation have decided to heed and embrace this knowledge and understanding and use it to preserve land and its ecosystem. The Tongass N.F. was set aside to exist as a whole, its community intact, not fractured, There is no way for land to survive the impact of mechanized man, this is why we must choose to let it be. Our bigger and better society is now like a hypochondriac, so obsessed with its own economic health that it has lost the capacity to remain healthy. The whole world is so greedy for more bathtubs that it has lost the stability necessary to build them, or even to turn off the tap. For some of us, firsthand that there is no other place on earth like it. Especially places like Bristol Bay and the Tongass National Forest, which are unrivaled in their beauty and their wildlife. It is rare to have a real sanctuary of wildlife undisturbed by roads and encroaching cities. This area of Alaska is truly the, "Last Frontier". The salmon spawning grounds alone, allow for millions of salmon to repopulate the Pacific, providing abundant fresh caught WILD Alaskan salmon to be available all across this country. The spawning salmon provide the number one source of calories to grizzly and black bear populations trying to gain enough weight to survive hibernation and the birth of their cubs. The bear population in the Tsongass National forest and all over Btistol Bay, is internationally famous! Those who are lucky enough to visit, get the rare opportunity to see up close, some of the largest carnivores on earth. These bears have been fishing these waters and living in these forests since God first created by them. I am not a global warming believer at all. However,

A government that fails to protect sensitive natural areas has rendered its existence pointless. Don't be pointless.

Maxwell Silvers

Trump says or does because it's all a tabloid crying for attention from the left and right. The one thing that our president has done that literally infuriates me is his lift on national parks and forests restrictions. I can't wrap my head around why people would think we shouldn't protect these ecosystems from poachers, loggers, drillers and miners. I feel if you support such a thing, you are living in a false reality. To deny the importance of our forests suggests that maybe the only thing that matters to you is material objects. It seems as though you have a perspective of political ideology similar to how one treats a sports team. Stop and analyse why anyone would want to destroy a ecosystem like this. It's insanity, pure insanity. "Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. The Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry, and isn't worth permanent consequences. Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. NEPA ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. Stop destroying our planet ..we need all the clean oxygen from the plants and trees ..without it we are doomed
