Dear Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue

Protect the Tongass National Forest! (Alaska Roadless Rulemaking #54511)

Thank you for reading this message. The Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry, and isn't worth permanent consequences. Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. NEPA ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. This area is of global importance, and opening it to logging and mining is brazen and dangerous.

Please do not destroy the Tongass old growth forest for fleeting financial gain. This wilderness should be preserved for the wildlife that lives there and for future human generations to enjoy. Cynthia Nevison Forests are burning all over the world. Tongass, the world's largest temperate rain forest, is a globally important resource for resources and biodiversity. If we are going to survive the ravages of climate change we need to set aside areas of great importance for stabilizing change and protecting species. We need to keep every last bit of old growth boreal forests to sequester carbon and slow the worst effects of climate change. As the world's largest and most diverse temperate rain forest, the Tongass is critical to maintaining the world's diversity as well as its importance as an important carbon sink. Opening it up to logging of its virgin timber is not a luxury we in the 21st century have. We must protect the last remaining intact ecosystems in the world of which the Tongass is a very important one. Whatever meager economic plus it may have from the few that stand to profit from it will be far outweighed by the negative consequences of permanently destroying one of the world's last great wildernesses. The Tongass National Forest deserves strong protection. It should never be opened to logging, mining, or oil and gas extraction. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change has made it clear that we are in the midst of a climate crisis. Cutting down old-growth forest and expanding fossil fuel extraction is utterly insane. It makes no sense. It is suicidal. It cannot possibly be justified on economic grounds, since a healthy economy depends on a healthy environment. In addition, Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. NEPA ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. None of those standards have been met. I urge you to protect the Tongass National Forest.

Please protect this pristine forest. It is home to many endangered animals and flora. It is a major player in the climate, helping to absorb the carbon dioxide from the atmosphere. Without the Tongass the global warming will accelerate, habitat will be lost for many endangered species and beautiful old forest will be lost forever.

The Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas will have permanent, detrimental consequences. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry, and isn't worth permanent consequences. President Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. NEPA ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. This area is of global importance, and opening it to logging and mining is brazen and dangerous.

The Tongass National Forest should not be opened to logging, mining, or oil and gas. It has global importance in limiting the effects of climate change, wildlife would be negatively impacted and it has the distinction of being the world's largest intact temperate rainforest. Only 1% of Alaska's economy would benefit from logging which doesn't justify the last damage to the entire planet that would result from logging destruction. Tongass can be kept intact while staying economically productive. Old growth forest and habitats are irreplaceable, and their benefits are enormous. Our grandchildren's grandchildren's grandchildren won't live to see the vast acres of 700 year old trees replaced should the Tongass's interior be gutted, even in part, but keeping them intact ensures we can trap carbon, keep salmon breeding habitats healthy, and provide a future for a booming eco-tourism industry in Alaska (look to Iceland for an example!) Imagine the wonders our country would have had we conserved better the great forests of the lower 48, fewer than 5% of which remain unlogged in the West, and fewer than 1% in the East. Alaska still has its reserves. purity left, we cannot bear to lose another one. I know we are discussing trees, and I know that the argument is to better human lives, but at what cost? What are we imposing on society when we take away our literal roots. When we replace oasis' of natural life with industrial sites, we may create jobs and we may make money, but we take away from a major source of contentment, happiness, and livelihood for humanity. While you may say, it's just one forest, in reality it is the continuation of a dangerously increasing pattern of destruction. One day in the not so distant future, we may be debating on the destruction of not our biggest nationally protected forest, but our last one. Please make history by standing up against this unnecessary industrialization. The money put into logging processes could be the money that revolutionizes clean energy resources. I hope you will consider the things I have attempted to bring to light. We may not all agree on how to treat it, but we all live on the same earth, and we're all gonna suffer either the decision to dismantle protection of the Tongass National Forest, opening it to logging and mining. There is a natural fragile balance to the ecosystems found in rainforests. Tongass National Forest, being the largest temperate rainforest on the planet, has a direct affect not just on Alaska or the United States but the entire planet. We know from experience that deforestation has a negative impact on global climate and biodiversity. No matter how small an area that is opened to allow logging and mining, it sets a precedent for opening and destroying the entire forest which has a direct negative effect on everything, including agriculture. Old growth forests cannot be replaced and that is just the truth of it. I am not saying anything you do not already know. Please, please do not give in to political pressures that sacrifice the long term benefits of the Tongass National Forest to minimal short term gains. Moomaw and others write that proforestation - growing existing forests to their ecological potential - mitigates climate change and serves the greatest good. They point out that intact and older forests annually sequester large quantities of CO₂, above and below ground, for long periods of time. They are the most carbon-dense and biodiverse terrestrial ecosystems, with other benefits to society and the economy. U.S. temperate and boreal forests remove enough CO₂ to reduce national net emissions by 11%. <https://doi.org/10.3389/ffgc.2019.00027>. We have an amazing national treasure in the Tongass National Forest, our largest rainforest. It is not only a tremendous living resource, of, say, salmon, but also a key contributor to carbon reduction. Indeed, the Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas will create harm that we will not be able to undo for decades to come, if we ever can. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% of this economy comes from the logging industry. How can this 1% be worth the devastating consequences? President Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). NEPA ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. Please follow the rules and judge wisely in stewarding this national gem.

It is also costly for the US taxpayer to open up the Tongass National Forest because logging in this location is subsidized in order to make it profitable. Finally, other industries rely on the environment in these areas. For instance, there are many rivers that support salmon populations in this area that are harvested by commercial and recreational anglers. Opening up this area to logging will likely reduce spawning habitat in these areas, which will lead to reduced salmon production along the Alaskan coastline and will reduce the amount of salmon that can safely be harvested. These commercial fisheries much more sustainable and profitable if the Tongass National Forests are not logged. Don't open up short-term taxpayer subsidized consider doing ANYTHING other than protecting the Tongass. How unbelievably irresponsible would it be – knowing what we know about the climate emergency – to open the area up to extraction and fossil fuel production. Entire towns are burning across the west, hurricanes are devastating cities, food is becoming scarce across larger swaths of land. How can we take action that only accelerates the destruction we're already causing? If you have children, I don't see how this could even be up for debate. years of experience. I have worked for government and in the private practice. In all the years that I have practiced law, I have never seen anything like this! Have you folks lost sight of your fiduciary and sacred responsibility to hold public lands in trust for the PEOPLE of the United States, and not just the corporate robber barons? The Tongass National Forest is the jewel in the crown of our public park system. It must be preserved. If you build roads and open it to logging, mining, and drilling, you will destroy it. The economic returns are de minimus compared with the ecological harm. We must preserve it intact. There is no justification for this senseless onslaught on our wild places. This is not a science-based decision making and as such, you are violating the law. NEPA requires you to base decisions on science, facts and the existence of alternatives. None of that has been done here. This proposal is wildly unpopular with the public, whose ultimate interest you are supposed to serve. The Tongass is old growth forest. I've the pleasure of visiting the Tongass Forest several times in my 68 years. This rare temperate rain forest is an outstanding natural resource worthy of preserving, at any cost. To even conceive of compromising this resource purely for corporate profit is at least short-sighted, and at worst, a betrayal of such real leaders as Teddy Roosevelt. Tongass has been once again 'exempted' from logging restrictions that were meant to protect it. Can we agree to leave this pristine and critical habitat alone? It is worth much more to humanity as a protected biosphere than as profit for a select few--and at the cost of irreparable harm to the wildlife we share this planet with. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry. importance. Opening up another natural space it to logging, mining, or oil and gas will have unintended and immeasurable consequences. Ex: The loss of old-growth forest will harm the effects of another one of nature's great air and water purifiers. Not to mention it's a beautiful/peaceful park that I someday hope to visit with my future grandchildren. We've already seen the consequences of over-logging on our water and air. My village in Illinois is constantly flooding because so much natural space has been paved over, creating water quality issues. Air pollution around the world is not only hurting the children and the elderly and the poor, now it apparently also impacts the neurological development of fetuses... I would like to live in a world with clean water and air. I mean, try checking the news or eating your dinner while holding your breath, or give up drinking water for a week. Is the risk of that sort of temporary inconvenience becoming a reality for future generations REALLY worth it to you? If you decide it enlightened and informed choice, to allow logging of a valuable ancient forest. Life is about quality of environment and care of people, not just making money for big business. The Tongass Forest, once gone, will be gone forever along with its wildlife and water storing capacities. Oil and gas are on the decline and new areas in sensitive places should not and need not be opened up. People want a world that's worth living in which does not only mean one avoiding higher temperatures and changed rainfall patters. it also means having environments that benefit the planet and those who are able to visit them. I urge you to do what is right and do not cave in to demands of people with so little understanding and no care for our planet's natural systems. STEWARDS of the land. This means, at least according to my Christian faith, that we care for the land we have been given--not abuse it, not overuse it, not destroy it. (2) We leave as much of the land and its natural riches for future generations. It isn't ours to take--it is ours to care for to ensure future generations can enjoy the same lifestyle we have.

Congratulations! You've just violated BOTH of my principles. These aren't crazy principles, either. They make sense. We can't eat money, so no matter how much money we have, if nothing is left, we won't be able to survive. There is no point in having children if there are no resources for them to live off of (or an Earth, for that matter), so my guess is that either you don't have children or you are planning on your family's future generations on dying off because you have chosen to leave them no resources to live off of. The problem with that attitude of leaving nothing for future generations is that you're dooming the ENTIRE human race to extinction. Good job! You've managed to wipe out the

the Alaska state government to nullify the vital protections for roadless areas in the Tongass National Forest. Eighteen years ago, the Forest Service came to the long-overdue but morally obvious conclusion that all remaining roadless forests are precious beyond economic measure, and that their highest and best use is to remain biologically intact. Since then, intact virgin forests have only become scarcer, both nationally and in the Tongass, and the moral case for their protection has only become stronger. For the Forest Service to even momentarily entertain this astoundingly selfish request from the Alaska state government is a gross abdication of your responsibility to the public interest. These roadless forests are national treasures, whose biological value vastly outweighs the value of any timber that will be extracted from it. This exchange of an immensely verdant, kaleidoscopic biological treasure for a low-value commodity of lumber pulp is the most lopsided, unholy transfiguration of treasure to commodity, that a myopic

This administration has yet to prove that it is NOT enriching themselves by this increased action of opening Federal Lands to the oil and gas and logging and mineral industries? Cause he would NEVER let them get in there for free. There is the history of our nation. of honoring our land. And those above industries have a long and very ugly history of destruction of the areas they worked in. STOP THIS NOW!!!

October 2019 To visualize and maybe even understand what is at stake the three of you have only to look at what the Tar Sands Ravaging has done to utterly destroy an entire Ecosystem. It would be a great crime against humanity to pursue Logging, Mining and Drilling in the TONGAS! Besides being the home of Native American and First Nations Peoples, the Tongas has a significant 'population' of Trees playing their irreplaceable role as part of the Earth's Lungs! Y'all ought to be promoting alternative and sustainable sources of energy and environmentally friendly building materials that do not destroy valuable trees! Must I remind you that extracting oil and natural gas, by whatever means, has already caused irreparable damage to streams, rivers and underground water sources? 'Extraction' activities have already caused preventable damage to human and animal health at significant expense to Everyone! I have asked you in previous letters whether you have obtained Scott

Alaska over the past six decades. Please don't make it into the Lower 48! It was the last frontier when I moved there during the Statehood year. It was pristine back in 1960 when my husband and I were charter members of the Alaska Rescue Group (I was Janie Swanson then). We need some roadless places. Furthermore, we definitely need forests and respect for the EPA. Opening the Tongass National Forest to logging, mining, or oil and gas would undoubtedly have detrimental consequences. Suggesting that it will have a positive effect on Alaska's economy certainly overstates any "advantage." I understand that the logging industry is but a minuscule part of the economy. Opening up Tongass can have bad consequences for tourism and sport fishing as well as tourism. The Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry, and isn't worth permanent consequences. Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. NEPA ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. ---It is irresponsible and unethical to destroy so much of the Tongass. Climate change is happening whether the powers that be believe it or not. Such cutting of trees hurts the environment and takes away habitat from wildlife who are already in peril. It is time to stop catering to loggers and others who are only interested in the money they will make.--- national forest, and largest intact temperate forest. Opening the region to mining, logging, or oil/gas will have huge, long-ranging, and permanent negative consequence, and will represent a blow to the purity of our nation's environment. While most of the support I've seen for this plan talks about the positive impacts on Alaska's economy, in reality very little of that economy comes from the logging industry. It's not worth the permanent damage and despoilment of this beautiful natural place. One thing that will have a huge impact on Alaska's environment is the intensification of climate change. As our planet's climate warms and Alaska's glaciers melt, the beautiful scenery, wildlife, and pristine landscapes will change in irreversible ways. Loss of this old-growth forest will contribute to climate change and global warming, and be a huge blow to the state's economy. Beyond that, this plan violates the National Environmental Policy Act process. Under those guidelines, all major decisions that affect the environment need to be fact-based,

What kind of legacy will you leave? How will you be remembered? Don't be vilified in the history books of the future as the one who made this calamitous decision to destroy a national treasure. You have responsibility to PROTECT, not decimate the Tongass National Forest. Soon we will not be able to sing, "America the Beautiful" with any truth or conviction. And it will be on you! Please find it in your conscience to oppose this ill-fated idea. There's still time to redeem yourself and earn the respect of Americans who understand the importance of stewardship of our land. The Tongass National Forest is a national treasure. It is environmentally sensitive. There is no need, financially or otherwise, to open this reserve to road making or the extraction of lumber or minerals. The value of this reserve is its natural beauty first, and secondly the ability to capture carbon. Both of which need to be preserved. Please, no development in the Tongass.

We are losing to many wild and free spaces the world over and once lost they do not come back. Like the Grand Canyon, I personally don't like how it is managed but I see the necessity. I would not like having the rim lined with condos parking lots and apartment building like Trump would like-commercialize it as much as you can and not appreciate it for what it is. Some things are even best left completely wild with only the occasional visit or overflight but some need visits to develop an appreciation of where we came from ,how we can benefit from not changing some things. The Tongass National Forest is extremely critical to our nation, and of global importance to the world's ecology. Opening it to logging, mining, and/or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences, and must not be allowed. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the fabricated argument that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry, and isn't worth permanent consequences. Please do not let this destruction to happen. Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act, also. This act requires that decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. Again, this is unneeded damage.

times. The Tongass National Forest is one of the last old-growth forests left in the U.S. There are few old growth forests left in Washington and Oregon due to logging. Those forests are irreplaceable and shelter wildlife. We need to utilize sustainable logging, not kill our last old growth forests. Destroying the forest also affects the ocean and salmon runs - which have been severally depleted in the last few years. There is more money made in Alaska off of fishing than logging. The Tongass National Forest is of significant importance both nationally and globally. Opening this protected space to logging, mining, or oil and gas exploration and/or production will have permanent, detrimental consequences. This administration's latest attack on wildlife and forests was made under the guise that it will boost Alaska's economy, when any increases will be insignificant (less than 1%), and therefore not worth the permanent consequences to our environment. In addition, Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), which ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and made with public opinion in mind. Finally, and most importantly, the loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change--a major threat that neither you nor President Trump seem to consider worthy of consideration.

As a retired ecologist, I am appalled that the Trump Administration is seeking to despoil what is without question one of most pristine and unique ecosystems in the world. This is the equivalent of putting a torch to the Louvre or the Sistine Chapel. It that a legacy you want to leave for your grandchildren? I sincerely hope not!

written following petition with my own comments. First and foremost is that I should not feel the dire need to write to you or anyone else about this subject! It disgusts me to my core that anyone would be so reckless, ignorant, and greedy to want to decimate this forest (in particular) with logging, mining, fossil fuel extraction, and all the infrastructure that goes with it. The Tongass is a pristine, primordial place, unique to not just America, but the entire Earth. It is a global treasure that America should protect, not pillage. With that said, I sincerely hope and pray that you will rise to the occasion and take a firm stewardship stance. Please refuse to let this mighty, majestic and life-giving wild place become just another victim of humanity. Ensure that your seventh generation has an awe-inspiring place to marvel at, to enjoy. national natural heritage I oppose USDA's proposal to exempt the Tongass National Forest and Chugach from the 2001 Roadless Area Conservation Rule. I support the "no action" alternative. This crucial rule keeps America's forests healthy and protected from logging and development, and dismantling it could restart industrial scale, clear-cut old-growth logging in Southeast Alaska, putting stands of 500-year-old trees on the chopping block. The Roadless Rule protects 9.3 million acres of breathtaking, undeveloped roadless land in the Tongass. The USDA's proposal will endanger much of the old-growth temperate rainforest remaining on Earth that resides within the Tongass National Forest. Not only does this proposal threaten habitat for wildlife like grizzly bears, bald eagles, moose, wolves and salmon, but it sets a terrible precedent that could lead to road construction and logging in remote, wild forest areas across the U.S. It's a step backwards for a sustainable economy in Southeast Alaska, and it could negatively impact

Trump's attack on The Tongass National Forest must be stopped immediately. Opening this area to logging will destroy old growth in his short term effort to boost Alaska's economy. This will have detrimental effect on the environment that we can't change back. We can find other ways to stimulate the economy besides the destruction of old growth in Alaska. Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. I expect my federal government to follow protective environmental efforts rather than dismissing global protection when status quo swings to the right. The survival of local fishermen, the preservation of Native American culture and for the environmental impact are among the many reasons why the treaty in favor of securing the Tongass National Forest is so essential. The tribes living in and around the Tongass Forest have been doing so for hundreds of years. Every aspect of their culture is deeply intertwined with nature around them. Please understand how horrible it would be to destroy this essential element in their lives. Maintaining and upholding their culture has been a fight for Native Americans from the moment Europeans took over their land. It has been an enormous struggle for Tribes to regain their freedom and rights to their lands. Tribal communities are working tirelessly to preserve their culture so they can pass it on to the next generation. If that doesn't speak to climate change and the importance of conserving the wild places that are left, then nothing will. The time to act is NOW, before it is too late. Killing more trees will do nothing but expedite our negative impact on the Earth and environment, and eventually, we humans will reap the consequences. It may seem as though we are removed from this dire environmental situation, and it is easy to put wealth above something that you are removed from. But the Earth is versatile, it will eventually bounce back from the damage we do to it, no matter how detrimental. What you need to ask is if you believe Humans to be as versatile, when the very air we breathe is full of Oregon bests Washington State DOTs & Transit agencies in too many ways. The new CRC I-5 bridge project I support, but object to this introductory reevaluation of the project as if the public is NOT entitled to know specifically why the project went sour. So, Oregonians are just supposed to trust the same leaders who left a political fiasco behind, no problem? Amtrak Cascades Talgo trainsets are better than Acela. FYI, the coach design is the World's 1st true HSR. Broke all records. Stills holds records #1 energy efficiency. A debate subject to consider is this: BEV vs FCEV vs PHEV? I'd calculate PHEV 60% demand. BEV 35% lesser demand need. FCEV 5% niche stationary apps. I hope you gentle persons reading this missive find my engineering expertise more than interesting. Deforestation is already a serious epidemic, by signing over this land, Donald Trump is adding to a global catastrophe of human destruction that is sending us, at incredible speed, toward another mass extinction event. Large and ancient forests account for massive amounts of the world's oxygen supply. Forests this large and this old account for large amounts of the world's oxygen supply and biodiversity. We need this forest to stay unharmed.

To be honest we need as many safe ecosystems for these animals as we can... having to replant a forest or compensate for this loss with the Amazon in its condition will be detrimental to many species... please consider that in the 80s we were already terrified of the loss of the forests and we see how doing nothing effected our planet as a whole. Be the change we need in the world, be someone you would be proud to know... if you have the power to help, consider how your legacy will be perceived. If you can help, please try, that's all I ask.

wasted money on discrimination, stole some of my rights away as a transgender and is destroying our earth for a better economy. He's not a leader, he's a business man with self centered goals and I do not want him running another term or I (a white native Wisconsin American citizen) am without a doubt fleeing to Canada. Already have been planning it out for some time... Trump and Hitler would have been besties if it wasn't for time difference and laws. I don't need that as my country's president. Ps I seriously don't understand how such a powerful and once amazing country could let such an unstable person run for the presidency let alone kicking his ass out when he got the seat. He's damaged our country and it's gonna take Another 2 terms for repairs to even make a dent not only in laws but in the faith and mindset in our minds. We can't take back all of the hundreds of school shootings that we have had since his presidency. We need a president who is gentle to our people instead of one that brainwashes and tears our own people

They have not complied with NEPA procedural requirements and have not passed the APA rules for providing adequate notice and comment, nor considered all of the substantive comments. In addition to that, these actions would not pass NEPA requirements because there are plenty of adequate alternatives that the Administration fails to consider. In addition to APA and NEPA requirements, it is unlikely that the Administration would be successful in complying with the heightened air quality standards required for heightened areas of protection with the Alaskan Wilderness in the surrounding area and the costs on the environment, climate, and surrounding communities would far exceed any small economic benefit thrust only upon those who are in the business of logging old growth forests. Legislation needs to be enacted to limit the rape of forests so that the forest can at least regrow with all its native flora and fauna. If they only strip a percentage of the land that they log, it is possible for all of it to regrow. Fishing is limited to allow for the regrowth of fish. Logging in an area should be restricted in the same way. The tree seeds are there to be able to replant the exact trees that are logged and more. It would be incredibly cheap for the logging no idea if my message will reach you, let alone be considered but I pray should it that it will spark an interest and a halt to this nonsense. As a kid, I've loved nature, being outdoors and especially animals. Small, large, lazy, active I love them all. I remember going to a restaurant in Galveston for my birthday called Rainforest Cafe. Upon entering I was lost for words and couldn't believe my eyes. The entire building was filled with wonders of a rainforest from tropical trees, vines and of course it's inhabitants. I cried tears of joy, couldn't believe it and felt like the most luckiest and blessed kid alive. The food and the Safari ride was incredible, I wanted to stay there till I died haha. My first experience was enough to go back more and fall more with anything to do with nature I'm a religious man. What will we do in 20 years when we realize the trees are not thriving anymore because we've cut them down for the sake of our own finances? What will money mean when we cannot breathe on our own planet? When wildlife is a rare sight, air thick and darkened through smog. This isn't a video game, it won't reset. Things are permanent; we must protect the world we have because it is our only home.

It's imperative that this Forest is protected and remain untouched. No amount of money, which it turns out would only be minimal anyway, is worth disturbing or destroying any part of the Tongass National Forest. The maintenance of this property in its natural state is extremely important for the species that live and grow there. Not everything natural needs to be destroyed to get at minimal natural resources to sell. There is more

Sonny, remember meeting you at the airport in Columbus, Ga. and you got out of a tiny private jet and had a cutout of GW's face with UGA hat on. A long time ago but I still recall it. Writing to you today regarding the Tongass National Forest. Our forests are are of incredible importance and, these days when illegal logging and deforestation for things like palm oil are irreparably changing our earth, I implore you to not allow this forest to suffer the same fate.

Protecting the environment isn't about saving "the environment" as a thing or a concept — it's about protecting ourselves. Environmental consequences of human actions affect other humans! We must conserve our environmental resources before it's too late. This isn't environmentalism vs. commerce — it's human survival vs. human extinction.

passionate about this issue affecting an area my friends and I regularly recreate, discover, and educate. This forest is home to a variety of unique and important species who would die off without this old growth. For example, the Marbled Murrelet (bird) that spend most of its time out on the ocean, feeding, but needs downed old growth trees, miles inland, to build there nests. With the degradation of these wild old-growth places, species like these will have to pay the ultimate price of death. We need more long term thinking in our elected leaders, which is something we are severely lacking in at the moment. These short term solutions will all flop when we realize the long term effects of our actions. Chances are you have thought a lot about this decision to allow logging and mining in the Tongass National Forest. I beg you to reconsider this decision and any decision that allows for the destruction of natural ecosystems for the "benefit" of people. Logging and mining are temporally irreversible. The enjoyment of nature and the tourism it brings will do more to boost the region's economy than logging, never mind the additional carbon sequestration benefits that will benefit everyone in this world. As a reminder, it says on your government webpage that your father said "We're all stewards of the land, owned or rented, and our responsibility is to leave it better than we found it." Will Tongass really be better than you found it if you get rid of everything that's there? My hope is that you and those around you will think beyond immediate monetary returns, and think of the bigger picture and the planet the generations after you will inherit.

Only a tiny portion of Alaska's economy might get a boost from exploiting the Tongass National Forest. A far larger portion of Alaska's economy is dependent on salmon, and other, fisheries - and salmon is dependent on the healthy rivers/streams in Tongass. Also, the Native population in that region is dependent on the salmon runs as well. Please do not destroy the big picture for meager short-term gains.

I wish there was a middle ground to protect animals and habitat and harvest some of the forest rather than see it burn and wasted. They can use helicopters to pull some out without major damage. At the same time the animals really need to be saved. It would be difficult to control it without the ability to arrest or eliminate offenders.

The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. I worked as a logger in the Tongass in 1972 on the Prince of Wales Island. It was being clearcut. The cut areas were not being re-planted. There was tremendous erosion and loss of habitat everywhere. The streams were filled with silt preventing reproduction of salmon and Dolly Varden trout. All the logs were sent to Japan for consumption from there and not to the USA. Please Stop all logging in the Tongass.

I am utterly opposed to opening the Tongass National Forest to extractive industries, whether logging, mining, or oil and gas drilling. Any major decisions affecting the environment must follow the process set out in the NEPA, but the Trump administration's short-sighted and ill-conceived directive violates this process and the trust of the American people. Both wisdom and modern scientific understanding dictate that old-growth forests, such as the Tongass National Forest, be nurtured and protected. Indeed, their destruction would only serve to worsen the effects of anthropogenic climate change. This is but the Trump administration's latest attack on wild lands and forests under the false guise of economic development — logging is only responsible for only about 1% of the Alaskan economy. Alaskans and all Americans can do better and deserve better!

Forest wilderness areas, the Tongass National Forest must be protected against resource extraction that will destroy its delicate rainforest ecosystem forever. This public land has always been roadless by design and must remain so if we are to retain its wilderness environment and the rich diversity of wildlife that call it home. It is outrageous that the Trump administration sees this public land, which also provides carbon sequestering for the global community, to be nothing more than a bribe for their political supporters in the resource extraction industries. This is not the good for the American people or the health of our planet and in fact is a betrayal of longstanding policy for short-term, politically motivated gain. This action indicates a profound lack of knowledge about old growth forests and forests in general. The trees one sees when looking at a forest is a mere 5% of what is actually there. There are hundreds, even thousands, of animals and complementary plants dependent on an intact forest. Replanting clearcut forest is a start, but it won't replace a five-hundred-year-old forest for, by definition, five hundred years. To trade this ecosystem for a 1% bump in one state's GDP is short sighted - and, frankly, stupid.

The Tongass forest in Alaska is our country's largest temperate rainforest. It is an essential habitat for wildlife species which have roamed there for thousands of years. If the economy is doing great (as claimed by current administration), there is no need to attack this large bastion of natural area. The Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry, and isn't worth permanent consequences. The Tongass National Forest is Old Growth trees and an important part of moderating the climate crisis. It also is home to many wild creatures and plants and should be left as it is. I oppose the rollback of the Roadless Rule and other ecosystems protections. We all share this planet with each other and all living creatures, now and in the future. We can not afford to desecrate the Tongass Forest now for short term gain.

Remember the song lyrics “please don’t sell Nova Scotia. You know we’ll never get it back”. Please help to make good decisions for the future of us all.

northern coastal California for 30 years. I walk, observe and work this land now for the full 30 years. The damage done by previous forest companies over 60 years ago is only just now being reversed. It will clearly take several hundreds of years to fully recover. Once cut there is near irreparable harm to the forest, the wild life and the carbon capture abilities. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH! We dont have that much left of our beautiful planet and the deep green its covered with. Please dont take this forest away. You will be not just killing the forest, but will kill every ecosystem and animals homes along with it. Including the instinct ones. Selfish human beings like this orange man will be the downfall of our great world one step at a time. Im scared to have kids to live and grow in a place like a greenless earth.

I shouldn't have to write this message. Our National Forests are important on many levels. I would like to know where you and your children and grandchildren plan to get there clean air? I AM open to finding out. Please tell me. Where do you plan to move to when all is destroyed on planet Earth? Or maybe you already have a homeon another planet??? Truly, I want to know. Mr Trump, I believe, indeed I know that the Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and that it should not be opened to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. Contrary to what some of your advisors say, this attack on wildlife and forests will not boost Alaska's economy since only 1% comes from the logging industry, and the permanent consequences will deeply damage other sectors of the economy. I believe that major decisions affecting the environment should be fact-based, consider alternatives, and be made with public opinion in mind. Tongass National Forest stores carbon to the equivalency of 8-9% of the nation's carbon emissions, a significant and vital carbon reservoir. We cannot afford to release emissions from such a vital area when we are already above and beyond where our national and global emission should be. This area is also a rare ecosystem, with old growth forest stands and vital habitat for species such as spawning salmon. Logging and mining activities will devastate the habitat species in this area depend upon and will degrade the environment through runoff into the watershed and decreasing the system's resilience to natural disturbances. The Tongass National Forest is of global importance, and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry, and isn't worth permanent consequences. Trump's directive violates the process of the National Environmental Policy Act. NEPA ensures that major decisions affecting the environment are fact-based, consider alternatives, and are made with public opinion in mind. The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. Stop killing our old growth forests. Tongass National Forest is irreplaceable. Leave it be. Industry and Corporations are only interested in profit and not in saving our planet, our forests, our lands, our National Parks, and our valued country. Someone has to put a stop to the greed and the killing of our forests. Save the Tongass National Forest now!

the heart of the Tongass. I have been to Wrangell for over 25 visits to see family. During those visits we have hiked and explored many virgin areas of the Tongass. I have observed clearcut areas that, even after 30 years still support an entirely different biome than that of a virgin forest. As a Zoologist, I understand the implications of climate change and the benefits of not clear cutting the Tongass, the only deciduous temperate rain forest in North America. "multiple use" of our National Forests became obsolete when it resulted in loss of the majority of old-growth forests and the habitat those forests provided for stressed and threatened species. Today, so little pristine old-growth forest is left of that which once covered our continent. It would be the height of reckless and irresponsible violation of your fiduciary capacity -- your responsibility for safeguarding the public lands for which your agency is responsible -- if you allow destruction within the Tongass. Your own agency's wildlife biologists can explain to you that ranges of minimum sizes are required for each indigenous species to survive and prosper. Or to put it in different language, to be fruitful and multiply. Failure to take account of the overlapping ranges of each species within an ecosystem causes that ecosystem to collapse. The kind of exploitive development under consideration would wreck havoc on the Tongass. The enrichment of the few at the expense of the many -- and at the cost of woodlands

Please, Gods, what will it take?! Are the extreme weather events - the hurricanes and floods and heat waves - not enough for you? Do you actually believe that party line bunk about opening it to development for Alaska's economic good? It's worth much more to the state intact than it would be in pieces. No one wants to hike through clear-cut hills, or take a rafting trip on rivers full of mud. The tourist revenues it brings in currently total billions of dollars. This is an era of crisis. We need our forests intact. Make the smart choice, heed Cassandra's warning, and leave the Tongass well enough alone.

IPCC Report warned that deforestation (and industrial agriculture) are fueling a vicious cycle of Climate Chaos, with scientists calling for IMMEDIATE CHANGES in land management (and food production) to halt our Climate Crisis. With a global temperature rise of 1.5 degrees Celsius (which is now expected by 2030) comes a HIGH RISK of water scarcity, wildfire damage, melting permafrost, and food supply instability. Yet our planet is currently headed for warming of 3.3 degrees Celsius ... more than DOUBLE the threshold for CERTAIN CATASTROPHE! Our world's leading scientists have clearly and repeatedly stated that the time for Climate Action is NOW! That means you need to be approving REFORESTATION and AFORESTATION projects, NOT more logging, mining and drilling of the world's largest and our last intact temperate rainforest! The loss of old-growth forest will intensify the effects of climate change. This latest attack on rare wildlife, cultural heritage, and lush forests is one of many the "Extinction Administration" has claimed will "boost the economy" of Alaska, when less than 1% comes from the logging industry and would potentially impact more prominent sectors like tourism or fishing. This is cashing out at the expense of a climate-critical ecosystem and wildlife. Hold forest and wildlife protection above corporate greed!

I'm not much of a leader, but I have moral value. That seems to be a rarity in today's society. Our planet has a natural ecosystem that is entirely self sufficient to sustain life, we take that for granted. Life may or may not be coincidental however, it should be protected no matter the cost! We, the people of the world have the power to shape it so why not help it grow into the most beautiful world in our galaxy? Why not spend the time we bicker amongst ourselves instead building a future for all life? I'm not much of a leader, but I'll be damned if I follow in the path of a man who only cares for himself.

Please save the Tongass National Forest, it is so beautiful and we don't want it to look like a lot of the lower states. Trees removed from mountain tops and left bare to erode and get more ugly, there are not enough forest lands, taking animals shelter with nowhere for them to go. If you have never been to Alaska, you should go to see how beautiful the state is.

Once it is gone, it will be gone forever. Living in a world without old-growth forests is like living in a world without elders. We need our elders. Just look around. The culture of NOW is ruining Paradise at a faster and faster clip. More than anything we need to learn to see the Long View of our presence on this Earth: seven generations is enough. Please protect this forest—and all old-growth American forests.

Please protect the Tongass National Forest from the activities that would degrade this resource, including opening it up to source extraction, logging, and mining. This is a intact old-growth forest important to wildlife and a habitat that can not be regained easily once destroyed. Please respect the National Environmental Policy Act. It was created with the support of both Republicans and Democrats who cared about protecting what Americans value. True conservatives want to conserve both American values, and what American's value: virgin forests, land that isn't degraded or polluted, a rich diversity of North American flora and fauna. Keep America great.

So please for our children and grandchildren don't take away this beauty, it may not be much to some but to others it means everything. There's not much beauty left in this world cause of this very reason so why destroy a place so beautiful an peaceful a place where your children an grandchildren may want to visit someday. It's not just a forest but a home to many animals it would be heartbreaking to see such beauty laid to rest Tongass National Forest! It is imperative we salvage all we can of nature - we have already destroyed way too much of it & it is harming us in ways many don't understand yet! I have been sick about this kind of destruction for all my life & too I'll to fight harder against it - for the trees & life there - which undoubtedly hold keys to many cures - perhaps even the one I need! It is of global importance to protect whatever nature hasn't been destroyed already - especially rainforests & trees - and opening it to logging, mining, or oil and gas has permanent, detrimental consequences. This latest attack on wildlife and forests has been made under the guise that this will boost Alaska's economy, when only 1% comes from the logging industry, and isn't worth permanent consequences - there are many better ways the economy can be boosted - I'd be happy to share my ideas. We all know the Earth is dying from human impact yet we keep expanding and destroying everything in our path to do so. We have already led to many extinctions and displaced animals. Even bears have been coming closer to humans and posing as a threat because we took away their homes. Where else can they go? Why can't Americans just be happy with what they have? Do we really need a pharmacy in every corner, a ton of fast food restaurants all on the same strip? They all have the same function, why be so redundant? So with this forest now, leave it alone. If you want space for some more building and companies we don't even need, just remodel or restore old buildings. There are plenty of areas humans have already destroyed and then left and abandoned. Stop human greed, don't take the rainforest.

worried about seeing important natural landscapes falling in the name of profit. Tangus National Forest is one such irreplaceable wonders of nature which plays a major role in global climatic system and eco systems. To give this precious land to loggers is to repeat history again which had stripped much of the US forests after the industrial revolution. Los Angeles, where I reside was built from wood of red woods that stretched from southern California all the way north to Pacific north. Today redwoods are limited to only a small area and a long drive from LA. I cant see that happening to Tangis National Forest. After researching I realize what a massive impact this forest has in the world and how destructive it will be to give the loggers the green light to begin stripping it to the ground. I urge anyone in our government, regardless of their political party to make sure they protect Tangus National Forest and not allow its trees to be turned into raw materials. contributes to my peace of mind and the air that I breathe. It provides ecosystem services such as air and water purification that promote a healthier continent and affect broader systems of air quality, water quality, and soil integrity. As a National Forest, Tongrass belongs to all of us. We the people are best served not by extracting timber from this particular area, but by conserving this as a resource of air quality, water quality, recreation, and peace-of-mind value. Please do not take away these resources from the people of our North American continent in order to benefit the timber economy. In this situation, where Tongrass is special in its size and being in-tact, Tongrass is not a good choice for timber production. The cost is too great, and a better decision could be made. Timber should not be harvested here. The US does not need to sell that much timber, and even if it absolutely does, the Tongrass is not the place to do it. Alaska is an important wildlife preserve, and the tongrass helps keep the state in-tact. The Tongass National Forest is of global Machines compact the soil and contaminate the area with spilled fuel, diesel emissions and litter left by the crews. Even during natural fires, certain insects and animals can survive, logging will greatly decrease those odds. The presence of man will likely keep animals from migrating back into the area for quite some time. This is our land Mr. President, not yours.

Even if you don't believe in climate change, you must understand that there are substantially fewer and fewer trees on our planet every year. Trees which are not only vital for clean air, but provide homes to more of God's creatures. It'd be a different story if everytime we took a tree, we planted one in it's place. But we don't do it enough. And the illegal loggers certainly don't do it. Maybe if more companies thought long-term about this, we'd have

We need to protect and protect what's left of nature in this world with all these wildfires taking place in this world and animals going extinct like koalas now among others...Now we are going to take from nature and all those animals that live there look at the big picture and that's what will this world turn into if we as people don't step up and do what we are capable of and protect what nature has no control over... Please step up and do what you know is the right thing to do and that's being a voice for all of us that doesn't get the opportunity to have to be heard and all the animals that are helpless thank you truly!

There is enough destruction elsewhere so I really think this could be sidestepped.

Phyllis Mosteller

We need to think about tomorrow too. It would do good to humans by giving jobs. But in the long run, it would be a cause to our destruction of our world. Our world is not young it is dying, don't add more to make it faster. Your young generations would have to pay the price. This was our ancestors world, it is our world now, it should be our future generations to enjoy too. So don't let anyone to destroy my world for political or personal agenda.

MINE: This land was not formed all these years ago so people could strip it from the earth and build things we have thousands of already. This is HOME for multiple of species living in it. How can you rip them of their solitude like that. Species upon species have become extinct due to people like this. Leave them alone. I do not see how this is right for these people tear all this land to pieces for their own benefit... Its wrong and disgusting. That rainforest is Directed to Mr. Trump, because he's the sole person/showing the greatest unamerican selfish person this is For some ungodly reason Trump your self-centered disrespectful way of thinking and doing things are for your sole benefit and unethical gains. You're not putting the future of our generations in their rightful place on any agenda. First and only first. Our world is theirs as much if not more than ever. You as well as most of our generation have lived our lives, "
