

This letter may seem like an old man looking through colored glasses or only nostalgia blocking the realities of the Stibnite Gold Project, but I believe my view to be at least reasonably clear..

I lived in Stibnite some Seventy Five years ago and had the chance to visit the project in 2019 and am very impressed with the project. As a young man of 20 I fished in the area in late September, I remember the abundant Salmon run at that time.

It is these memories and the scope of the proposed reclamation, and Midas Gold's commitment to see it through that gives me hope to see not only what can be done, but to do it and run a business, is exciting, I do believe that these types of projects will save our natural resources, provide more jobs, and give country additional sources of commercial minerals, and recreation. That is a win, win, win for all entities that are touched by the project.

This is an enormous and expensive undertaking, it is a good solution to have the funds derived from the natural resource in the project to make the restoration possible.
