

Dear U.S.F.S.,

I was born and raised in Cascade and have watched people struggle to make a decent wage. The community needs real jobs that provide decent wages so that we are not dependent on tourism. Midas does nothing but help the community. Midas employees are present at community events and every outreach opportunity, and Midas provides financial support for those events. If Midas and its employees care about the community that much, then they are definitely going to care about restoring the environment that supports the community.

I have grown up fishing and believe that Midas intends on being responsible to take care of the water shed so that the site is truly restored. Although this is important to me, the financial stability of the community is more important so that people don't have to move away to find a place to raise a family while earning a decent living.

Sincerely,

Jacob Z. Felton
