

I am pretty disappointed in Christian. It is clear he wanted this off his hands so badly he'd let anyone take it. I would have thought he was way more invested in Holland Lake and all that makes it unique, special and a true treasure here in Montana. I understand that upgrades are needed but these new owners are not thinking about the many consequences of a large expansion on public land. They seem to keep feeding people bullshit about their heart being in it but please. Conservation is a word that truly gets abused and they are uber guilty of that. I read their development plan and Holland Lake just doesn't have the ability to sustain what they want to do. It's such a small, unique place that hosts endangered species and habitat and serves as the gateway to the epic Bob Marshall wilderness. We've lost so many amazing places due to development, clearly these guys only care about profit by having to go so large. Tripling the size of a resort and operating it year-round will unfortunately bring a beyond negative impact. Maybe they can go to a larger lake that can cater to their plan? No one thinks these greedy salespeople are putting in a dam ski lift or whatever, stop the ignorant responses to that. Do all the environmental studies, stop selling out to people who have absolutely no clue and save just a few of those treasured public lands that the public can all enjoy!

Deirdre Howell
Missoula, MT