COMMENTS (continue on back, as needed):

Clear cutting, in my opinion, is destructive in so many different ways. It could cause risks of erosion, which I have already seen on mountains that have been devastated by it. How can anyone that loves our Kentucky mountains agree to clear cutting. None of us will be here in a hundred years to say, "That was a terrible decision." Nothing is left behind. How can that be beneficial. It only benefits the logger and government in increasing its bottom-line, money. The love of money has destroyed so much in claims that it is good for everyone. What is good about destroying an entire mountain. Devastating for wildlife, climate, eco-system. Why would you destroy something you claim to love and are protectors of?
