

When Perpetua Resources states on its website the following statement for the public to see, there is no question in my mind Perpetua Resources will stand by this near term and long term commitment:

RESTORE THE SITE

Abandoned after decades of mining, the Stibnite area desperately needs repair. Through mining and economic investment, the Stibnite Gold Project will restore the water quality, landscape, fisheries and natural habitat of the area.

We are committed to creating a project that will leave the environment in better condition than we found it and making sure the resources at site can be enjoyed by future generations. While restoration is a big benefit of the project, it will also contribute millions of dollars to the local and state economies and provide hundreds of family-wage jobs to Idahoans.

Planning for the future also means saving for the future. Before mining begins, we will set aside the funds necessary to complete the environmental reclamation of the area.
