This objection should really be obvious. If you are burying the lines on Beachhead Flat Road where there are not only no views, but no homes...THEN common sense and recent wildfires in California should convince you to:

BURY THE LINES the last 2.5 miles into the VOC where there is not only the Red Rock Scenic highway but 6,000 people living there...Fire insurance is already going up (doubling) and some people have been denied coverage completely. New poles closer to homes will only escalate that problem...

We are not asking for the moon, just BURY THE LINES.....Even raise our rates by what you need to cover the costs of burying, which we feel has been exaggerated by you....

I live in Las Piedras and you should come and see how close the huge pole is to homes and our swimming pool....Unbelievable really....

BURY THE LINES....We will continue to pursue this, we have been on to all our legislators (state and federal) to see the serious threats this poses to us in this community.....

Sincerely and Hopefully,

Kristine Mclean
