Comments: The Chugach range has been an iconic range that skiers and snowmobiles have flocked to for decades upon decades. For many skiers, the Chugach have been an iconic range that every die hard must visit at least once. However, the massive scale of the mountains make motorized access a necessity.

To get rid of motorized access in the Chugach is to take away a part of the great state of Alaska. Countless professionals have made their name in the Chugach whether on a snowmobile or skis, however nearly each one at one point found their way into these beautiful mountains on a snowmobile, helicopter, or airplane.⁴

Please strongly reconsider the plan to limit or remove motorized access in the Chugach so as to preserve this age-old tradition - a pilgrimage of those less fortunate that must spend their days in the lower 48. Those that work countless overtime hours in a simple pursuit of spending a couple weeks in the Chugach riding the most easily accessible and wild terrain North America has to offer.
