Comments: The lands in which we ride have been used for recreating of all types that co-exist and help

One another and thy fellow man. With policing of trash and debris the land can remain

As it was intended for use in recreating and outdoor adventures. Alaska and Alaskans thrive on this and are good stewards of the environment. With enough snow pack a snowmobile does no more harm than high winds, earthquakes or forest fires. Monitor the depths and let folks enjoy recreating in one of the last, if not the last wild areas in which to pursue said recreational as our forefathers have for thousands of years. Over regulation and red tape will drive up policing costs and cause budget shortfalls and closures to areas without proper due process and end user input. Let the snowmachiners co exist in other skiers (who make trails for said skiers)and knock off this garbage that I see from Fairbanks. Grow up, co exist, be good stewards and leave its as ya find it! Sledders unite! Don't ride when there's not enough snow cover! Don't leave your trash...Skiers are often the worst at trash "burying." Let's co exist and stop this arguing and BS MAN...let's ride and help each other when needed!
