I am a transplant to Alaska 8 years ago from Montana. I love this state and love to recreate in it whether it be hiking, biking, skiing, rafting, snowmachining or ATVing. I oppose any loss of area or rights to the motorized users. There is far too much land to restrict them. The amount of land in the Chugach that is already non-motorized is vast. Keeping the plan the same if not expanding it is my vote. Option B under the plan seems like the most logical. I have a toddler now and in a few years I would like to take her in the backcountry. I would like to take her places I have never been instead of telling her how the good ol days used to be.
