RE: "Roads to Trails"

The photograph attached is being sent as an afterthought and applies to my previous comment.

The photo attached was taken Sept. 13, 2013 on Long Island (Willapa Bay National Wildlife Refuge.)

The road corridor was never "daylighted". The red alder along the road left a layer of leaf litter which has decomposed over the last two decades, leaving a nice soft cushioned surface to walk on.

Far better than walking on a packed-down, rock-hard gravel roadbed.

Thanks!
