Comments: I do not believe the Heber wild horses should be rounded up to the extent set in the plan. We travel from the valley and always hope to catch a glimpse of the horses while there, many times we don't see any. If the numbers are as high as estimated one would think you'd have no trouble finding them. So many wild horses around the country are being rounded up, the numbers that are left in these herds are not likely to leave a viable gene pool to sustain healthy horse in the wild. I'd hate to see a part of the American Wild West come to an end. Plz reconsider the rounding up of the horses.
