Hello,

I am a frequent user of the WRNF for outdoor recreation. I would request that the number of wells and the number of drilling sites be very limited. If there is an increase in the number of drilling sites, please keep that number as low as possible.

I would further ask that the sites be located away from sites that have recreational uses and potential for recreational use.

Most importantly: The history of extractive industry shows clearly that drillers do not "clean up after themselves". Please do everything possible to ensure the financial responsibility of industry to clean up when they move on.

The Rocky Mountains of Colorado are a very special place. Our economy depends on tourism and will continue to depend on tourism once the wells are dry and gone.

Thank you,
Richard Rosenfeld
