Comments: I am a proud 4th generation family member who gets the privilege of raising our 5th generation in our family cabin at Holland lake, that was built by my great-grandfather, grandfather, and great-uncle. In the past 10 years alone, every thing is being taken for granted and people want to move in and change things. Holland Lake is absolutely beautiful, serene, and perfect the way it is. The cost of everything around us is going up at a substantial rate, and I am horrified that people want to take our slice of heaven and build it up into some gross retreat that will cause such harm to the habitat and wildlife around our beautiful area.

The locals who have been at Holland Lake for generations should get a say in this matter - this is not okay- just as much as a farmer would want a 4 lane interstate carved right between his crop fields!

The forest service is already having difficulties with our public campground, now that tourists have found this place and have ruined the free parking/camping for the rest of us who enjoy this place year round. They don't need to now be tasked with trying to manage the strain this would put on our roads, ecosystem, and not to mention the loons who call this quiet lake home.

Please stop trying to take every corner of Montana and turn it into California - we like things just as they are
