Comments: This is what a commercially thinned (logged with tops attached), then underburned to reduce activity fuels; looks like 5 years after treatment; when a wildfire blew through the stand. The wildfire was suppressed with a hand crew from a road using a backfire and garden hoses. No aerial resources were needed. Untreated areas were completely consumed with few if any green trees left. The picture illustrates the highly effective use of commercial thinning and post treatment use of Rx fire in building resilient forest able to accept wildfire.
