

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 4/17/2025 12:24:45 AM

First name: DR. AMY

Last name: Eisenberg

Organization: Center for World Indigenous Studies

Title: Associate Scholar

Comments: Please respect First Nations Peoples and sacred places of Turtle Island. This is enshrined in our constitution. There have been too many unlawful and damaging development projects that desecrate Native American homelands and contaminate their ceremonial sacred waters.

First Nations Peoples' land, water and treaties must be respected and honored. This is documented in writing. We must respect law and realize that the land we are on is the sanctified homelands of Native American peoples and their relatives are plants, trees and animals.

Please understand and respect their life ways. First Peoples suffer greatly because of the historical and present abuses and disrespect. The violence of unsustainable development causes physical and mental trauma to the people, plants trees and animals. The earth is where their ancestors are buried. They demonstrate love for Mother Earth by protecting her. She sustains all life. She sustains us all.

Remember, remember the sacredness of life. This is in the hearts and soul of every Native American person on Turtle Island. Can you understand this sacred reciprocal relationship? SIA AND EIA were never conducted before development projects. FREE PRIOR AND INFORMED CONSENT IS IN THE UN DECLARATION IN THE RIGHTS OF INDIGENOUS PEOPLE. Study this carefully and abide by it. You will learn that desecration causes illness and disharmony for the people, the land, the trees, plants and creatures and the developers. It is dangerous to harm our Mother Earth who sustains all life.

Search your heart. We cannot live on as the natural world dies.

Do good

Be kind and compassionate

Respect life and life systems

Our lives depend on these values

Dr. Amy Eisenberg

Center for World Indigenous Studies

The University of Arizona