Comments: I ask you to take a second to think beyond this moment. Think beyond this week or next week.

I want you to think about the day you leave this world, and only your descendants remain. What type of legacy are you trying to leave behind you and leave for their beginning? Is it destruction and desecration? Or is it respect, compassion, and preservation?

Don't you want the people and the land to keep your memory alive, to remember you as a compassionate being that held a good vision for them during your time?

Money will not save the future.

Compassion, selflessness, preservation, and love will.

Please, do not allow the desecration of the Black Hills. The natural world is alive and breathing with its own heartbeat. Protect it as it would you if you dared to truly live with it.
