To Whom it may concern,

I am very concerned about fracking in general but especially in our national forests and other preserved areas for wildlife and geology. The damage it could cause would be irreversible and catastrophic. Land is becoming a scarce commodity and to tamper or ruin an unspoilt piece of forest for the sake of easy oil access is abhorrent in every way. Please consider the actual people's wishes, not to mention the animals affected who have NO say, instead of the giant oil companies' greediness and short-mindedness for such a long lasting decision.

Yours sincerely,

S. Sweet
