The land should be managed by the state's and the state's choose how to manage their minerals. The loudest voices from environmental hypocrites who consume oil and naturals resources but cry out against their development and exploration should not overtake the voices of the people who are pro development as long as it is done in a reaponsinle way with the land being returned to its original state when complete.

In a Republic, the federal government should not own land; relinquish its management to the state's and let their citizens benefit from the natural resources. Or at least use the money from the permits to pay down the national debt.
