Comments: to USFS and to Congress: I urge proactive management with strong conservation practices for the entire WSA area with regard to all permits and users. Just as bells can not be unrung, the potential for damage or harmful impact is significant.

We already see undesirable changes; some via human factors and some via natural phenomena. Demands are high and unrelenting. Too few of us exist who know and appreciate the value of true wilderness and the benefits of the fringe areas (many of which are included, perhaps under duress or for lack of better, more appropriate vernacular, political correctness. Regardless of rational, lands proposed for loss of protection, are going to be given up as squandered resources which for existed for the benefit of all for gains of a few.

Many would not agree, however, I firmly believe that during our time as advocates and stewards, we must feel compelled to be the voice of the future generations and to fully act on their behalf. We must respect, love, protect and use gently the invaluable and finite resources of the WSA. I am extremely disheared at the locations and key habitat and access points that may be lost under the new revision.
