Comments: Stewart "Brandy" Brandborg, the last remaining architect of the visionary 1964 Wilderness Act, makes a plea to all who love Wilderness in "Today's wilderness challenge is maintaining wildness." Brandy writes, "Now, after a lifetime of work for wilderness, I ask its defenders to never forget: Wildness is foremost the quality of wilderness that we must seek to preserve. It is the forces of nature at full play in the absence of human intent." So, I too believe the word, 'Wilderness' begins with the word, WILD. Let's keep the Nellie Juan-College Fiord as just that, WILDERNESS. a road here or there, should not be allowed. Snow machines should only be allowed for sustenance hunters, oil exploration-forget all about it. Logging is out of the question completely. Hunting-FORGET THAT TOO. I spend a lot of money to hike this area every year or so. That will stop if the area is not 100% wild.
