Teddy Roosevelt knew how very important it was for the United States to preserve its wilderness areas, and that without protection, they would fall victim to profit making and destructive schemes that could rob us all of treasures that are irreplaceable.

There isn't one reason you should hold firm on the protections that this large area of untouched forests, terrain, lakes, rivers and wildlife have been offered, there are many, many, terribly important reasons. These areas are becoming rare in the world, many already having fallen victim to encroachment and ruin. The tranquility, diversity of wildlife, air quality, beauty and very health of our planet, depend on those entrusted to value and shield wilderness areas, to continue to safeguard their well being.

We are blessed to have the resources that we do, and all who love nature and appreciate the beauty of this world, will thank you.
