Comments: My spouse and I live in Soldotna, Alaska, and utilize the CNF multiple times a month year-round. In the summer, we hike, camp, fish, and mountain bike in the forest. In the winter, we use the forest for backcountry skiing and snowmobiling, and occasionally, winter camping.

From what I understand, there is no proposed revision with respect to snowmobiling boundaries. I agree with this. As both a backcountry skier and snowmachiner, I believe there is plenty of space for everyone under the current boundaries. I have never experienced a negative interaction with snowmachiners as a skier, nor with skiers as a snowmachiner. Regardless, the boundaries are appropriate as-is.
