Comments: I think of Alaska as a low population state where there are already ample areas for outdoor recreation. To increase areas for recreation that degrades the pristine nature of anywhere in Alaska seems to me as not needed and unwise. Opening areas to snow mobiles? I believe there are already plenty of areas for this activity. Destroying habitat for more snowmobiles? I believe there are already plenty of areas for this activity. No more are needed.

Using air craft equipment for skiing? Again, there are already plenty of areas for skiing.

I ask you to reject these ideas for the Chugach National Forest.

thank you
