Elaine Kohrman, Forest Supervisor

Subject: Pristine wilderness deserves a chance in the Cibola National Forest

Dear Elaine Kohrman, Forest Supervisor,

There are several places across the Cibola National Forest that are special to New Mexico and the future of our wilderness, including the San Mateo, Magdalena, Bear and Datil Mountains.

Several conservation, recreation and historic preservation organizations collaboratively developed a proposal to protect these lands. The proposal is reinforced by a comprehensive field survey that documents the wilderness character for each area. The survey found that all of these areas remain untrammelled by man and appear natural, with outstanding opportunities for solitude and unconfined recreation.

The Forest Service must consider this wilderness proposal as an alternative in its environmental impact study. This is a reasonable alternative that should not be eliminated from consideration. We need to protect and preserve what we have left of our wilderness in their untamed and in their natural state lands in New Mexico for future generations to enjoy and explore the way our forefathers have done for generations.

Thank you.

***I know you were not interested in form letters, but I do feel that either having an additional alternative for the public to consider, or increasing the amount of wilderness included in both Alternative B (the preferred alternative) and E (the Backcountry alternative) is an important part of the process. There are several places across the Cibola National Forest that are special to New Mexico and the future of our wilderness, including the San Mateo, Magdalena, Bear and Datil Mountains, and the NE corner the Mt. Taylor Ranger RD.

My most treasured time is spent hiking in New Mexico's wild places. Our mountain ecosystems are unlike those of any other state, and are important for conservation as well as the pure enjoyment of visiting such special, unique, untrammeled spaces.

I have worked in Limestone canyon with the Albuquerque Wildlife Federation doing stream restoration and erosion mitigation. I am firmly attached to this area.

***I and many of my white, Hispanic, and Indigenous friends find recreation and refuge in the Cibola National Forest. We are all disturbed by the number of mining operations and gravel trucks that already ransack this vulnerable environment as it is. The idea that the Forest Service won't protect Cibola is an outrage and a violation of the trust that those of us who support the Forest and Park Services. I can't think of anything that brings the diverse people of our state together more than our concern for our natural environments and to think that our Forest Service will betray that is appalling. For that reason we implore you to please consider the below:
