Comments: Obviously, congress needs to increase the funds for your programs/research/ restoration and for wildlife protection.

With our increased human population, we need more employees out in the field to protect the forest, our streams/lakes as well as the wildlife! Our streams do end up going through our communities, too. Congress needs to be educated, too.

School science classes for all must educate all children on wildlife welfare.

Even if classes can't, videos should be shown during lunch time on a large screen in the lunch room. (Kids might even stay for the show).

I study petroglyphs (always researching for animals - enjoying the big horned sheep, too) for my art work.

I do not appreciate the destruction by the ATV's of the trails, chasing wildlife and the game of challenging each other in "attacking" steep banks with their machines.

Disperse camping isn't working - campers move their camp right up next to the creeks! We live below below these camps. Camp grounds are appreciated where trained people manage such with care.

Wonder if ag people can give meds to domestic sheep to keep them from infecting wild sheep? And, not take funds from the forest care.

I don't appreciate the giving away of our wilderness areas - I want to enjoy more for hiking and study. We need all of our national and state parks!
