Comments: I deeply disagree with the proposed leasing of 54,000 acres of forest land for oil and gas extraction. Our current crisis in loss of biodiversity and habitat for endangered species across the U.S. should be at the forefront of the Forest Service's mind when considering such a dangerous and irresponsible project plan. Granting these leases will do nothing but put more money in the hands of those who happily destroy precious ecosystems and continue greedily searching for more ways to profit from the Earth's dwindling resources. I urge the Forest Service to reject the entirety of this plan, and to show its strong support for the protection of wild places and a non-tolerance for the greed and destructive practices of oil extraction companies.
