Comments: Nevada is making a new name for itself and pushing the public to see it for more than gambling and second rate public lands. More tourists and residents are coming to Nevada to experience its beautiful outdoor spaces and public lands. The Ruby mountains are still a hidden gem but have the potential to draw more people and more money to our state... but only if they are kept pristine, inviting, and protected.

The trajectory in energy is towards sustainability, not oil and gas. We shouldn't sacrifice one of the most beautiful places in our state for an industry on the decline. Why not advocate for solar or wind farms with energy storage via Tesla power packs? Let's encourage better business in Nevada, for the residents, tourists, wildlife and beautiful open spaces just waiting to become even more popular destinations.
