Comments: To whom it may concern,

As a avid outdoors man and conservationist I ask that you give full consideration to the long term effects of allowing oil and gas exploration in the ruby mountains. It is my fear that we will continue to disrupt nature with these types of projects until we have destroyed the habitat that the wildlife in the area so desperately needs. These are public lands that should be available to everyone for recreation and enjoyment of nature and should not be blocked off, disturbed, or otherwise ruined by more energy production. Energy development in Nevada's Ruby Mountains puts at risk the very qualities that make these public lands important to sportsmen and women.

Respectfully,

Tanner Simons
