Comments: The Ruby Mountains of Nevada are some of the most beautiful ranges in America. It is home to some of the most majestic species of wildlife like the mountain goat (the only mountain range in NV that holds them) snowcocks, and is home to the largest Mule deer herd in Nevada. The Ruby mountains hold so many beautiful hiking trails and hidden mountain lakes only acessable by foot. All of these previous aspect that this mountain range has to offer would get lost behind fracking and oil fields. Fracking and oil drilling would do more harm than good, especially in the future. Fracking devistates and ruins the lands and it will directly affect the animals negatively, that call the Ruby mountains home. This is our public land and it should not be used in gaining resources, it should be used to understand and appreciate what the great outdoors have to offer.
