As typical the Forest Service has the scale all wrong with little understanding of the additional problems this project will create and perpetuate. Where is the holistic analysis? Is the Forest Service capable of holistic analysis, if so, where is it?

There are many problems which need to be addressed including trash, bikes impacting hikers, idiots jumping into the pool, and current parking which is a nightmare. I would suggest scaling back by 75% the parking lot and employ people to staff the area, charge for parking and tell any potential jumpers they need to first put a 1000 dollar deposit to cover the potential of medical needs after the jump. Include a 500 dollar fine for littering. Put some common sense into practice. Thank you
