Comments: The number one spenders in the outdoors industry are hunters/fishermen and off roaders. They are also some of the most educated and serious conservationists on the planet. Providing access to public hunting, fishing and off road trails ensures that these traditions passed down from generations continue to benefit our economy, the health of our wildlife populations, and a lifestyle that in many parts of the country have become a luxury that only the wealthy can afford. We cannot turn a blind eye to the conservation experiment failures of the past funded by arm chair tree huggers, and animal activists that do not know anything about true habitat and wildlife management and conservation. The men and women that spend their time and their money to be out there and truly understand the challenges we all face with urban sprawl and the loss of access to millions of acres of private land that many of us used to be able to enjoy, growing up in a different time, have a voice and economic impact that cannot be ignored. Thank you for taking the time to consider my thoughts.

Sincerely,

Bruce Davis
