Comments: I believe that having an established area for riding, such as designated single track trails in Arizona, creates a safe area for riding, allows individuals to enjoy the outdoors, and does so in a low impact and environmentally friendly way.

Most of these designated trail systems in other parts of the state and country are adopted by local riding clubs which helps keep the area clean and also provides knowledgeable resources to other for enjoying the outdoors in a respectable way.

These types of venues help educate users, allows them to take pride in their area and protect their riding area. It also gives an outlet for locals to get out with their families and provide much needed family time that is lacking in our country these days. It will also attract others from outside the area which could produce revenue and additional traffic for local business.

In my experience, the individuals that use these types of designated trail systems take great pride in them and leave the area better than it was when they got there.
