Comments: To whom it may concern,

I am writing this letter in response the the current mapping of forestry.

I am a father of four and have owned my own business in California for 25 years.

As a parent and avid adventurer, I spend a lot of time in the wilderness.

I feel that more are should be opened up for riding our snowmobiles.

We are already limited to where we can ride.

Snowmobiling leaves very little of a foot print on wilderness. They are driven over a foot minimum of snow and in areas of desolation.

I have been riding myself for over 17 years and have not seen any kind of negative impact on our wilderness.

I call it our wilderness because as a citizen of the United States we are entitled to this area.

This activity is very family oriented and brings community together.

Therefore I feel more area should be opened up for riding over snow mobiles.

Respectfully speaking,

Dave Miller
