As an avid snow-shoe-er, I appreciate the quiet environment the snow-blanketed mountains provide. Snowmobiles are really, really noisy, and disturbs that tranquility of the experience for miles around. Snowmobiles have plentiful areas outside the roadless area; I prefer to keep the roadless area free from motorized vehicles.

In addition, actions that might further endanger the rare Sierra Nevada Red Fox should be avoided. Having just discovered a population in the wilderness, it makes sense to protect it, in part by prohibiting snowmobiles.
