Comments: * The Great Burn is one of the very largest intact blocks of wild country in the lower 48. The Great Burn is important for wildlife: it is a pivotal crossroads for wildlife connectivity for species like grizzlies, linking wildlands in the north with Central Idaho wildlands. The area is home to mountain goats, wolverine, lynx, and other animals that need room to roam without the impact of motorized recreation. Please keep the Great Burn area a place that can be enjoyed for generations.

Thank you,

Colin Woodrow
