Comments: I am not a motorized user, but believe that this land is needed for all to use. Easter PWS is not nearly as used as Western PWS and the two deserve different standards. I tend to believe that friction between user groups is overblown in the Valdez area and the most use is concentrated to a few months in the spring with Heli ops, sleds, and human powered users. Part of the fun of living in a more remote area is the lack of rules, that's what brings a lot of people to Thompson Pass and the rest of the Eastern Chugach.

Also, after using the Shelter Bay cabin on Hitchinbrook and seeing other cabins in the Sound, I would advise the NFS to seriously consider moving cabins to more accessible areas. I have a shallow draft boat and was unable to get into Shelter Bay at High tide. These cabins should be easier to get to and would see more use.
