Comments: I have been involved in 3-4 of these plans,in all they have limited winter machine riding.This has been done under the cause of environmental damage.I have road for 38 years and have never seen permanent damage done,this is a sport really that very few people do ,it brings family's together on the weekends,to spend time in the wilderness which is why we the people create these areas.Snowmachines these days are very environmental friendly ,compared to all the planes and autos we see in the state these days,Snowmachines are trivial for emissions .Lets be honest this is about a certain sector of people who want motorized machines out of the wilderness nothing more,they don't care about these family's bonding on the weekends.And you never see anyone who is not on a snowmachine where I ride on the peninsula.In reality you need to open up more areas,since you have closed off areas I have seen 4 or 5 times the riders in my area because of your limiting their areas,that is going in the wrong direction if your argument is damage to the forest.Thanks for reading this.
