Comments: It is important that we preserve this very special area in Alaska.

It is a habitat for wildlife on land as well as the salmon fish that live in the waters.

It is a place where people can visit in order to study the ancient habitat of the state.

This area holds life that has a right to life just like humans do.

Areas like this are what keeps us alive, with fresh air and water and plants that give us oxygen.

Animals play a part in this system by pollinating plants, eating other animals so that they don't populate, etc.

Too many areas like this are being destroyed, hence the reason why we are getting more storms, droughts, forest fires, etc.

If we keep destroying these areas, the human race will not have long to survive!

Period.
