Comments: Please protect this area. It may seem that allowing a little to get chopped down or deregulated would not hurt much, but over time, a little will turn into a little more, then a little more. So much of our country was once beautiful wilderness and farmland, but is now nothing more than concrete jungles with strip malls, corporate franchises, honking horns, and a rat race that rarely, if ever, rests. Some time ago, we needed more cities, but as we are now seeing, cities are everywhere, the pace of life is getting faster, and people are not as happy as they once thought they would be because of it - so now it is time to protect the areas we have left, and to hope that some of the concrete jungles that are abandoned and out of use, will someday have a chance to revert back into local parks, walking trails, sanctuaries, and or other places of natural wonder and admiration. Please don't throw any more acreage away. It may never be seen again. And all for what?.....
