Comments: Alaska is one of the last states that don't have extreme laws regarding land use and recreation. It becomes more and more important to keep motorized land use open for the next generation. It is already hard enough to get kids outside and off the game systems. Motorized restriction has already started up in Hatcher's and now it's hard to know where I can and can't ride. The land should be available to use equally for all Alaskans without one group or another being catered to.
