Comments: I have been riding snowmachines in the Chugach National Forest since 1998. Turnagain Pass was the first place that my wife and I rode in 1998. 20 mile creek and Placer valley are the closest places to ride from Anchorage. These areas are great places to experience the best terrain that Alaska has to offer.

I try to take all my winter guests to Spencer Glacier to show them the awesome scenery and getting up close to a glacier. It is a great place to take beginners and novices out on snowmachines. I was involved in the current plan that has been in place since 2002 as a past president of the Anchorage Snowmobile Club. It is important to recognize that the Forest is supposed to provide recreational access to all users. It is NOT supposed to be managed like a National Park. I support Alternative A which is to leave access the same as it is now. I am strongly opposed to alternatives C and D.
