Comments: This is insane to have to even be writing in this fashion to fight for a place to take my family and recreate, create memories with my children as my dad did with me. In this day and age of social media it has been made easier to police our selves more so by communicating about good and bad trails, Places that Need less traffic due to low snow conditions or a specific hazard in place and deeming a more suitable route. I feel like it shows more pride in this instance rather than having to be told by the government what when where we can ride. The other side of that coin is living off the land. At what point is enough enough....
