Comments: Snowmobiling is not a just for fun thing, it's a passion and a way of life for many many people. In some of our areas it's an absolute way of transportation. Snowmobiles do way less harm than people are cracking it up to be, snowmobiles do not destroy our environments they actually pack more minerals and nutrients in the grounds that are ridden upon. I have witnessed this first hand being a grain farmer in northwest Ohio, fields that I allow snowmobiling in I have planted with winter wheat and you can tell where a snowmobile has been come spring time because the wheat is at least twice as tall and twice as green as the crop surrounding it. I am a avid snowmobile enthusiast and travel to many places to go snowmobiling and participate in events, ranging from New York to Alaska.

I stand with all snowmobilers and protecting our way of life is my duty.
