Comments: I am commenting mostly in support of Alternative D. In Prince William Sound, Nellie Juan/College Fjord deserves full Wilderness designation. The 'wild' characteristic of the sound is valuable both to locals who recreate and fish in the sound and the tourism industries that are so important to southcentral ak's economy - it makes sense to protect the wilderness study area as wilderness.

None of the plan alternatives really satisfy my questions about winter recreation management. With snowmachines having rapidly developed recently, more and more terrain is now accessible to them. A recreation opportunity spectrum for winter should probably look different than the summer maps given for the alternatives. I think the way snowmachine noise carries and can affect non-motorized users (and wolverines/goats) could be taken more into consideration.
