

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 10/30/2018 1:13:56 PM

First name: Joel

Last name: Carlson

Organization:

Title:

Comments: There was a study done in New York recently that showed that the human form, i.e. people on snowshoes, hiking, or on cross country skis is more frightening and causes more stress to animals than snow machines, ATV's, dirt bikes, etc.

We all pay taxes. We should all have access. Multiple use and shared use has been successful for decades here in Montana. I don't understand why a vast areas that Alaska provides couldn't be shared with success.

Please consider the economic reason to continue allowing snowmobiling in the Chugach. Also consider the lack of evidence that these machines add stress to wildlife as there is no study supporting that. Thank you.